“Against all odds: Israel survives”

A documentary

Thursday, July 16, 7:30pm

Given the circumstances surrounding Israel's birth as a state, and the odds against its survival, Israel should not exist as a nation today. Yet it not only exists, but seems to thrive in spite of its adversaries. Why? How? This documentary from 2006 goes beneath the facts of Israel's survival to explore the reasons Israelis themselves believe they have survived against all the odds against them. As Israel's first prime minister, Ben Gurion, said, "If you don't believe in miracles, it is not practical to exist in Israel".

Each of Israel's wars are filled with unexplained phenomenon of enemy soldiers surrendering for no reason, and usually while on the cusp of victory. The stories behind them have never been explored, until now. Journalist Michael Greenspan confronts military leaders, battle commanders, strategists, and common soldiers on the field who provide their viewpoints of remarkable stories.
